Girls Volleyball First Game!

The Lady Cougars volleyball team launched their season on the evening of August 26th with a spirited home match against the Air Academy Kadets. While the final outcome wasn't in their favor, the team displayed heart, hustle, and promising chemistry on the court.

Despite falling in straight sets, 25-15, 26-24, and 25-15, the Cougars made the Kadets earn every point. The second set, in particular, was a nail-biter, showcasing the Cougars' resilience and teamwork.

Laila Reyes Ochoa, team manager and former player, praised the squad's performance, stating, "The girls played their hearts out and molded well as a team in the first game. I'm excited to see what they bring to the next one."

With optimism fueling their drive, the Cougars are already looking ahead to their first away game against Liberty High School, set for 6:00 p.m. The team is determined to bounce back and make their mark this season.

La Niña Winter

As we enter fall in Colorado, giving us a break from a hot summer, some states are not as lucky and skipping right ahead to winter.

According to CNN 10, La Nina, the periodic cooling of ocean surface temperatures, has about a 58% chance of appearing this fall from September-November. Once it arrives, it is likely to last all winter and make a mark on the country's temperature.

The Northeast is expected to get more snow but warmer temperatures for the South. Last winter was marked as one of the warmer winters, and as for Colorado in 2025, this means for more precipitation and for a cold winter.
